

The art of giving to others can come in many forms. For example, you can give gifts to others or you can give your time and help to others. Around the holidays, it is traditional to exchange gifts with people you love or care about. It is also very important to help others who are less fortunate.

Giving to others helps in two ways; It makes the people you are giving to feel good and it makes you feel good. When you give your time and help to others, it shows that you care about people and how they are doing. People need to look out for and help one another.

During the holidays, many families spend time together and celebrate. One part of the celebration is to exchange gifts with each other. The most important part of the celebration is for families to be together.

Carly Clapper

2nd grade
Starchild Academy